the Authority, Secretariat, SBBs, BMCs and Expert Committees.

About the Seminar

A number of emerging areas of law have not figured either in the curriculum of law teaching institutions or in the skill building exercises for a practitioner of law. As such, While the demand for Professional Advice, Practice and Conflict Resolution are constantly on the ascendant on these areas, comprehension, capacity to understand and the much needed skill of application, are conspicuous by their absence in the academia, bar and the Bench. It is thus an imperative need, to update and adequately equip in them among all the concerned. Biodiversity Law is one such area craving for attention in the academia for putting into application through practice for a law professional. The National Workshop on Bio-Diversity Law – A Cross Over Regime Between Conservation And Commerce is intended to address this felt need. Being organised by BMS College of Law, one of the premier law teaching institutions in India, that has produced world class practitioners of law-that includes, eminent judges of Chief Justices of India stature-) presents an excellent opportunity for Law Teachers, Budding Lawyers and Young Professionals to get initiated into this exciting aspect of learning and application of law. The Commons Cell in National Law School of India University, Bengaluru and the National Biodiversity Authority, Chennai are partnering BMS Law College, by lending their expertise and experience in this intellectual enterprise.

The workshop intends to acquaint, familiarise and build skills in the knowledge, application and practice of biodiversity law in India, among the students, teachers, researchers and practitioners of law. A number of Expert Presentations on a wide variety of issues concerning the law await the participants in the Plenary Sessions.

In order to facilitate participation in larger numbers and to act as a catalyst for gaining deeper insights in the subject, Parallel sessions are conceived to enable teachers, practitioners and students from different parts of India to make presentations on a number of themes, as indicated below:

1. Case Law concerning Biodiversity
2. Comparative study of Biodiversity legal regime in other countries
3. Adequacy of safeguard measures to ensure bio-safety concerning invasive species and hazardous micro-

5. Access and benefit sharing mechanisms Biodiversity law.
6. Exemptions and exclusions from the operation Biodiversity Act in India
7. Issues of interpretation, enforcement and compliance Biodiversity law in India.

About the Seminar

A number of emerging areas of law have not figured either in the curriculum of law teaching institutions or in the skill building exercises for a practitioner of law. As such, while the demand for professional advice, practice and conflict resolution are constantly on the ascendancy on these areas, comprehension, capacity to understand and the much needed skill of application, are conspicuous by their absence in the academia, bar and the bench. It is thus an imperative need, to update and adequately equip in them among all the concerned. Biodiversity Law is one such area craving for attention in the academia for putting into application through practice for a law professional. The National Workshop on Biodiversity Law - A Cross Over Between Conservation and Commerce is intended to address this felt need. Being organized by BMS College of Law, one of the premier law teaching institutions in India, that has produced world class practitioners of law (that includes, eminent Judges of India (retired), presents an excellent opportunity for law teachers, budding lawyers and young professionals to get initiated into this exciting aspect of learning and application of law. The Common Call in National Law School of India University, Bengaluru and the National Biodiversity Authority, Chennai are partnering BMS Law College, by lending their expertise and experience in this intellectual enterprise.

The workshop intends to acquaint, familiarize and build skills in the knowledge, application and practice of biodiversity law in India among the students, teachers, researchers and practitioners of law. A number of Expert Presentations on a wide variety of issues concerning the law await the participants in the Plenary Sessions.

In order to facilitate participation in larger numbers and to act as a catalyst for gaining deeper insights in the subject, parallel sessions are conceived to enable teachers, practitioners and students from different parts of India to make presentations on a number of themes, as indicated below:

1. Use Law concerning Biodiversity
2. Comparative study of Biodiversity legal regime in other countries

It is thus an imperative need, to update and adequately equip in them among all the concerned. Biodiversity Law is one such area craving for attention in the academia for putting into application through practice for a law professional. The National Workshop on Bio-Diversity Law - A Cross Over Between Conservation and Commerce is intended to address this felt need. Being organized by BMS College of Law, one of the premier law teaching institutions in India, that has produced world class practitioners of law (that includes, eminent Judges of Chief Justices of India stature) presents an excellent opportunity for law teachers, budding lawyers and young professionals to get initiated into this exciting aspect of learning and application of law.
